Master Sgt. Gary Allen, center, gives 52nd Component Maintenance Squadron spouses a tour of the jet engine maintenance shop Nov. 14. The tour was offered as an opportunity for squadron spouses to get a first-hand look at the various jobs within the 52nd CMS and to see how the squadron fits into the wing mission. About nine spouses attended the first-time tour. Squadron officials plan to offer another spouses' tour in the spring, said Master Sgt. Carey Shoff, 52nd CMS first sergeant.

USAFE officials name 52nd FW installation excellence winner

Wing commander lauds members for staying 'Team Eifel Ready'

By Col. Stephen Mueller
52nd Fighter Wing commander

You are the best in U.S. Air Forces in Europe, winner of the command-level 2003 Commander-in-Chief Installation Excellence Award.

I am very proud of each and every one of you for your dedication, hard work, and desire to keep Team Eifel Ready. I know there are lots of members of the 52nd Fighter Wing who put in many extra hours to "ready" our base for the USAFE evaluation. Your extra effort clearly made a difference to the four colonels who evaluated us. The base-wide clean-up was crucial to a positive first impression, and mother nature's October winds significantly challenged us up to the very last minute, but you truly showed our Air Force core value of "excellence in all we do."

During the "dry-run" preparation, our group commanders continually marveled at your ability to communicate the critical nature of our business and how each individual's effort keeps Team Eifel Ready. You were so impressive during the practice that we knew the evaluation team would see the same spirit and enthusiasm. They did!

The evaluation team chief told me that he had never in his career seen a base pull together with such teamwork and morale. He went on to say that he felt proud to have just been a part of the evaluation team and noted that it was a privilege to serve with such outstanding men and women. Another colonel evaluator said that our airmen inspired her with their job knowledge and sense of teamwork. Simply awesome compliments!

All four evaluators noted that the areas they visited bragged not only about their section, but also the teamwork with other units. That teamwork helped them become even better. By giving credit to others, they in fact showed their excellence.

I have said on numerous occasions that each and every one of you is critical to the success of our wing mission and that we cannot do the job without your skilled expertise and true teamwork. Like complex machinery, one part may seem insignificant when examined in isolation; however, when you take the part away, the machine ceases to function.

Team Eifel, thank you for your dedication and effort to make the 52nd FW the best wing in the Air Force, you should all be justifiably proud. Congratulations!

Immunizations clinic fights flu season with shots

By Maj. David Duque
52nd Aerospace Medicine Squadron

The wing has gotten a good jump on the annual flu shot program and is already at 48 percent.

The goal every year, however, is to reach 100 percent to fully protect wing forces against degradation due to influenza, said Lt. Col. Michael Panosian, 52nd Medical Operations Squadron commander.

To help the wing achieve this, the 52nd MDOS has planned a flu shot line for active-duty members Dec. 2-3 and Dec. 5-6 from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. in building 217. This will be the big push to get the rest of the wing immunized.

All other shots, except yellow fever and anthrax, will also be available. People getting immunized must bring their yellow shot record.

Why all the fuss about ensuring wing members get immunized? Influenza, also known as the flu, is a contagious virus. It attacks the nose, throat and lungs and is different from a common cold. The flu usually comes on suddenly, with symptoms of fever, headache, tiredness, dry cough, sore throat, nasal congestion and body aches.

Most people who get the flu recover within two weeks, but some people develop life-threatening complications such as pneumonia. Anyone can get the flu, including healthy people, and serious complications can occur in any age group.

The influenza virus is spread when people who have the flu cough, sneeze or speak, which sends the flu virus into the air. When other people inhale the virus, they become susceptible to the illness. The flu may also, but less often, be spread when people touch surfaces that have flu viruses on it, such as a door handle, and

Big 22 practices night operations in Red Flag 02-04

Compiled from staff reports

The 22nd Fighter Squadron recently returned from fighter training during exercise Red Flag 02-04 at Nellis Air Force Base, Nev. More than 170 wing members deployed in support of the exercise.

Since its inception in 1975, Red Flag has become the largest composite training exercise in the world. The exercise typically involves a variety of attack, fighter and bomber aircraft.

“For 22nd FS pilots, Red Flag 02-04 provided the opportunity to fly and fight over the Nellis ranges, which is critical to combat preparation,” said Lt. Col. Timothy Strawther, squadron commander. “The airspace over Nevada allows for a full range of training activities, which allow Big 22 pilots to be on top of their operational game. In addition, flightline personnel had the opportunity to share techniques and procedures with a wide range of other organizations on the ramp at Nellis.”

The event also offered the unique opportunity for night flying. Red Flag 02-04 also offered, “Night Flag,” which allowed pilots and maintainers to practice their skills running a 24-hour, seven-day weekly operation, said the commander.

The training opportunity for the 22nd FS started early, however. The flight route required a 36-hour stop at Shaw AFB, S.C., and the initial ocean crossing included 13 aerial refuelings within the 10-hour flight, said Strawther. Also, the flight from Shaw AFB to Nellis AFB took an additional four hours with three more aerial refuelings.

Airman 1st Class Dominic Lunsford, 52nd Component Maintenance Squadron, waits to marshal out a 22nd Fighter Squadron F-16CJ as Staff Sgts. Chris Cabano and Ed Proper, 52nd Aircraft Maintenance Squadron, remove the tire chocks at Red Flag 04-02 at Nellis Air Force Base, Nev., Nov. 6.

Accidents

By John W. Keeler
52nd Security Forces Squadron
Reports and Analysis

Sixteen Team Eifel members experienced vehicle accidents in the past week, three of which were major.

The first accident took place on K-38 between Spiecher and Herforst. A Bitburg Polizei investigation revealed that an airman didn't see a yield sign as she proceeded to make a left turn on the main thoroughfare and was hit by a local national driving on the priority road. The local national was the only person injured in the accident and transported to the Krankenhaus in Ehrang. The airman's vehicle sustained damage to the left rear door, fender and rear wheel assembly. The other vehicle was totaled.

The second accident happened at the traffic circle on L-46 adjacent to Memorial Avenue. An airman reported that his vehicle struck a road marker and hit the traffic circle mound. The airman suffered head injury, which rendered him unconscious. The airman was transported to the Bitburg Annex emergency room. Vehicular damage included a broken front bumper. Civilian property damage included a broken road marker. The vehicle was towed from the scene.

The third accident took place on L-46 near the Beilingen turn-off. An airman reported that as he negotiated a turn, he lost control of his vehicle and drove into a ditch. There were no injuries. The vehicle sustained undercarriage damage and a blown front tire.

The 13 minor accidents involved:

- Six from inattentive driving.
- Four while backing.
- One driving too fast for conditions.
- Two identified as the fault of another.

In addition, 18 citations were issued.

Flu

then touch their nose or mouth.

Influenza is caused by a virus, so antibiotics such as penicillin won't work to cure it. The best way to prevent the flu is to get the influenza vaccine, commonly called the flu shot, each fall before flu season. Should a vaccinated person still get the flu, it will often be milder than in those who did not get the shot. Also, the flu shot only helps people avoid getting the flu. It doesn't prevent other illnesses.

The flu shot is mandatory for active-duty members. Unlike last year, there's no anticipated vaccine shortage for this year's vaccine. However, to ensure the 52nd Medical Group vaccinates those who need it the most, officials have prioritized who gets the vaccine first. This year Spangdahlem Air Base prioritization lists active-duty immunizations first and then DEERS enrollees. This includes people 64 years or older, people with chronic high-risk medical conditions, pregnant women and women at 13-weeks gestation or more, children age 6 months to 18 years old on long-term aspirin therapy. Then, all others.

The flu shot is available to all active-duty family members and retirees in the area. Family members and retirees must remember to bring their yellow shot records. The flu shot is also available to pay patients, including contractors, unsponsored personnel and others, on a fee-for-service basis.

Base schools participate in the program by offering the flu shot to faculty members and students through the school nurses. Also, children enrolled in the Bitburg Annex pediatric clinic may get their flu shot at that clinic Monday through Thursday from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

The flu shot is always available through the Spangdahlem AB immunizations clinic.

Call the clinic at 06565-95-8121 or public health at 06565-95-8308 for more information.

Spang airmen receive nonjudicial punishment, confinement

(Editor's note: Article 15 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice does not specify particular punishments for any offense. Commanders considering nonjudicial punishment consider the nature of the offense; the record of the service member; the needs for good order and discipline; and the effect of nonjudicial punishment of the service member and the service member's record.)

During October, 10 Spangdahlem Air Base airmen received nonjudicial punishment under Article 15 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Also in October, two airmen were convicted in courts-martial.

■ A staff sergeant violated Article 111 by driving drunk. The commander imposed a reduction to senior airman, a suspended forfeiture of $200 pay for two months and 14 days extra duty.

■ A staff sergeant violated Article 86 by failing to report to work on time. The commander imposed a suspended reduction to senior airman, forfeiture of $200 pay for two months, 14 days extra duty and a reprimand.

■ A staff sergeant violated Article 111 by driving drunk. The commander imposed a suspended reduction to senior airman and a reprimand.

■ A staff sergeant violated Article 86 by failing to return from leave on time. The commander imposed a reduction to senior airman and 45 days extra duty.

■ A staff sergeant violated Article 111 by driving drunk. The commander imposed a suspended reduction to senior airman, forfeiture of $170 pay for two months and 45 days extra duty.

■ An airman first class violated Article 117 by using provoking words and Article 134 by being drunk and disorderly. The commander imposed a suspended reduction to airman, forfeiture of $250 pay for two months, 15 days extra duty and a reprimand.

■ An airman first class violated Article 86 by failing to report to work on time and Article 92 by transmitting pornographic material on his government computer. The commander imposed a suspended bust to airman and 30 days extra duty.

■ An airman first class violated Article 109 by damaging a privately owned vehicle and Article 134 by being drunk and disorderly. The commander imposed a suspended reduction to airman, 15 days extra duty and 30 days restriction.

■ An airman violated Article 112a by wrongfully using marijuana. The commander imposed a reduction to airman basic. The airman has been administratively discharged from the Air Force.

■ An airman basic violated Article 86 by failing to go to an appointment. The commander imposed 30 days extra duty and 30 days restriction.

Courts-martial

■ Airman Basic Justin D. Adney pleaded guilty to three specifications of Article 134 and one specification of Article 92 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice during a summary court-martial Oct. 18.

The airman, assigned to the 52nd Civil Engineer Squadron, was sentenced to 30-days confinement and a forfeiture of $737. He was found guilty of unlawfully entering two dormitory rooms, for being disorderly and for being derelict in performing his duty by willfully failing to return a dormitory master key to the bay orderly room on or about Aug. 10.

■ An airman assigned to the 52nd Aircraft Maintenance Squadron was found guilty of violating three articles of the Uniform Code of Military Justice during a special court-martial Oct. 31.

Airman Basic Jermond K. Nichols was found guilty of violating Article 112a, wrongful use of marijuana; Article 128, assault; and Article 95, resistance. The airman wrongfully used marijuana on various occasions, struck another airman and resisted apprehension by a member of the base security forces.

A judge alone tried Nichols and sentenced him to a bad conduct discharge and confinement for five months.

Members of the 52nd Contracting Squadron Base Support Flight make up this week's Top Saber Team.

Top Saber Team

Unit name: 52nd Contracting Squadron Base Support Flight

Unit responsibilities: Supports the multi-role 52nd Fighter Wing's mission and its unique mix of nearly 70 A/OA-10 and F-16C/D Block 50 aircraft by providing timely acquisition support to more than 13,400 people. Dedicated business advisers trained to contract for mission essential, quality of life services, construction and commodities. Provides enhanced readiness via responsive contract support for worldwide humanitarian and contingency operations.

Number of members: 11

How does the team fit into the 52nd Fighter Wing's mission? The base support flight contributes to the mission of the wing by providing 13 concessionaire contracts including the Eifel Line, Hertz Car Rental and club restaurants to name a few. They purchase all wing commodities from heating fuel to million-dollar computer buys. Additionally, base support members buy and administer large dollar service contracts that enhance the quality of life for 52nd FW members.

Eifel Salutes

52nd Maintenance Group

The maintainers are working hard at keeping things running ... Master Sgt. Robert Block is doing a great job improving work areas in both his section and the flight. Not to be outdone, Staff Sgt. Sean Callies' finding of two chaffing lines on an A-10's landing gear prevented a possible emergency. Tech. Sgt. Eric Whittington didn't find any "chaffing lines," but he did find a way to turn around the cannibalization management program and get positive results. On the security side, Tech. Sgt. Alex Ragnoli's management of the personnel reliability program has been exceptional.

52nd Medical Group

Capt. Tina Allen has reached out and provided great patient care. Speaking of greatness, Capt. Donna Hornberger's talent and enthusiasm was key in making a great showing during the installation excellence visit. The members of the Spangdahlem pharmacy team are to be commended for their superior customer service ... and if one great team was not enough, the 52nd Medical Support Squadron combat medics are lauded for their unyielding dedication to patient care.

52nd Operations Group

The 22nd Fighter Squadron has returned from their deployment to Red Flag. Top performers were Staff Sgt.

Rachel Rueschman, who kept the computers running smoothly ... Capt. Steve Peute for superior skills in planning and leading six night operation missions ... Capt. Matt Jensen for superb performance as a combat wingman during night operations ... and last but not least, Capt. Chris Vance, who as a scheduling officer, ensured 100 percent operational effectiveness.

52nd Mission Support Group

"No comm...no bomb," read the base marquee last week. They weren't dropping bombs, but Staff Sgt. Michele Brooks and Senior Airman Jeff Jackson are some top communicators who worked hard renovating the commander's support staff area and improved the atmosphere greatly. From the services side, Staff Sgt. Curtis Savoy achieved greatness by being the first U.S. Air Forces in Europe airmen to be awarded the "fitness specialist pin." No pin for Capt. Alyson Miller, but a great "thanks" for preparing the wing for the installation excellence visit.

Top Saber Performer

Name: Staff Sgt. Keith E. Hisle

Unit: 52nd Contracting Squadron, Bitburg Annex

Duty title: NCOIC, Commander's Support Staff

Hometown: Prineville, Ore.

Years in Service: 10

Nominee's contributions to 52nd Fighter Wing mission success: "Staff Sgt. Hisle maintains a 100 percent on-time rate for enlisted and officer performance reports, and decoration submissions and fitness ergometry testing. His contributions to quality of life and morale are evident through his involvement with the booster club and fund raisers," said Master Sgt. Rob Swett, contracting squadron superintendent.

Off-duty volunteerism and professional development pursuits: Booster Club secretary, organizes Airmen Against Drunk Driving squadron weekends, and is pursuing business and management degrees with the University of Maryland.

What do you do for fun? Reading, watching movies and traveling to exotic and historical destinations. I also enjoy playing with my dog, Chloe, and most importantly, spending time with my wife, Amberly.

What do you like most about being stationed here? The challenges of my job, the people I interact with on a daily basis and the various European cultures.

What's one thing you'd like to see changed or improved at Spangdahlem Air Base?

Being stationed at Bitburg Annex, I'd like to see the choices at the library updated and expanded. Also, I'd like to see the commissary carry more health foods similar to those found in health food stores.

Spangdahlem duo share hobby, career

By 2nd Lt. Gerardo Gonzalez
52nd Fighter Wing Public Affairs Office

Not everyone has the courage to ride on top of 1,000-pound beasts capable of tossing and trampling a human being like a wadded up napkin. Not everyone has what it takes to step into the highly disciplined world of an Air Force military training instructor. But a military couple stationed here is doing the former and has undergone strict scrutiny and been selected to do the latter.

Staff Sgts. Travis and Brandy Beck, from the 52nd Equipment Maintenance Squadron, are Spangdahlem Air Base's rodeo riding duo headed to the "great state" of Texas, where upon completion of MTI school will be busy "riding" Air Force basic trainees, and when time allows, bulls and horses.

"The Beck's are truly an outstanding couple," said Maj. Peter Hofelich, 52nd EMS commander. "Both do a superb job and have the professional skills to excel at any tasking."

On the road to "excelling" at rodeo, Travis has taken a few beatings. But injuries, including a ligament-ripping shoulder dislocation, have not been enough to keep Travis away from the sport he has been a part of since he was a child.

"I've done it forever," said Travis about his involvement in rodeos.

He was first put on a horse at the tender age of 2, started riding by the time he was 5 and got into rodeo riding later on while still a youngster.

Travis' experience and talent are apparent, as he has won numerous awards including the Professional Armed Forces Rodeo Association 2002 Saddle Bronc Riding champion, Calf Roping champion and All-Around champion.

"I just started," said Brandy about rodeo riding.

Small in physical size but big in courage, Brandy has also racked up some awards in her short time participating in rodeos. She was the Professional Armed Forces Rodeo Association 2002 Break Away Calf Roping champion and cowgirl Rookie of the Year.

Brandy's interest in rodeos peaked when she traveled with Travis as he made his rounds around the European rodeo circuit. She looked at it as an avenue to continue something she already enjoyed, riding horses.

"It gave me something to do," said Brandy, an aerospace ground equipment mechanic with the 52nd EMS and a five-year Air Force veteran.

The search for "something to do" led the Becks to apply for a four-year controlled tour of duty at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas as MTIs.

MTI's are the Air Force's drill sergeants. At Lackland, they are responsible for transforming newly enlisted civilians into airmen and preparing them for service in the Air Force. Often seen as a good career move, those selected for MTI duty undergo a stringent application process where only the best applicants who have established solid military records are selected.

Travis and Brandy have established those solid records, said Hofelich, a 16-year Air Force veteran.

"Both are disciplined, yet demonstrate the necessary people skills to inspire the young troops," he added.

The MTI selection process was "interesting," said Travis as he described the mental evaluation part of the selection process where he underwent a series of questionnaires that included a wide variety of personal questions.

"You have to go through physical conditioning exercises and you also have to go through the mental aspect of it," said Travis. "They want to make sure you are the example all those troops want to look up to."

Some of the Air Force's top enlisted leaders have served tours as MTIs. Former Chief Master Sergeants of the Air Force James McCoy and Gary Pfingston both wore the blue "smokey-bear" hat of the MTI.

For Travis, MTI duty will give him the opportunity to contribute to the Air Force on a "bigger scale."

"I want a chance to try and help the Air Force ... everyone has got to do their part to help the Air Force," said Travis, who currently works as a unit deployment manager for the 52nd EMS. Brandy takes a lighter view of the special assignment they started considering at their previous duty station in Japan.

"It's something different," said Brandy, who met Travis while they were both going through technical school following basic training. "It will add a little more spice to life."

"We always have to be doing something different," added Travis, who married Brandy in Japan, after they were assigned there upon graduating from technical school.

Their impending assignment as MTIs has brought them visibility within their unit, including some lighthearted teasing from their co-workers.

"Some people tell me, 'You'll be good at it' or 'I can't see you yelling at people,'" said Travis.

"I get it a lot working in a 60-person shop," said Brandy. "I've been told 'Why don't you go out and practice and go yell at those guys.'"

The Beck's take the teasing in stride and look forward to MTI duty and making a career out of the Air Force.

"Like everybody, I'd love to make chief," said Travis. "But that 1 percent is pretty small," referring to the percent of enlisted people who are in the rank of chief master sergeant.

"I'd like to make master (sergeant) by 20," said Brandy

"The Beck's can achieve any goal they set their minds to," said Hofelich. "They will do great as MTI's, particularly because they exhibit a passion for the Air Force lifestyle ... and they thrive in a high operational environment."

Top Air Force leaders say, ‘Thanks for giving’

WASHINGTON — The following message is from Secretary of the Air Force Dr. James G. Roche and Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. John P. Jumper:

“Thanksgiving is a time when Americans pause to reflect on our nation’s abundant blessings.
Indeed, each citizen in our democracy has much to be grateful for -- our way of life built on freedom and liberty.

“With these numerous blessings comes an equally great responsibility; the responsibility to serve a cause greater than self -- to serve as freedom’s champion and to stand firm against terror and aggression. As airmen, our efforts in support of the global war on terrorism serve as a rallying point for freedom-loving people everywhere. Whether this Thanksgiving finds you at home station or deployed to a distant corner of the world, know that your service is tremendously meaningful and appreciated.

“We send our heartfelt thanks to the entire total force of active-duty, Guard, Reserve and civilian airmen who perform magnificently each and every day. Your commitment and dedication ensure that the United States Air Force remains the world’s premier air and space force, and your contributions to our nation’s joint operations provide great comfort to those who value freedom around the world. On behalf of a very grateful nation, thank you for your service.

“Have a safe and happy Thanksgiving.” (Air Force Print News)

Leader’s view

Team Eifel success relies on staying ready, focused

By Lt. Col. Kevin Booth
52nd Operations Support Squadron commander

Two months ago, Team Eifel validated our ability to quickly and efficiently react to short-notice wartime tasking. We generated aircraft, processed troops and equipment and flew off to meet a notional “Euro Lightning” commitment.

Our Operational Readiness Inspection success was due to lots of hard work, preparation and effective execution. Intense preparation and subsequent success are often the precursors to a team let-down.

I am confident that current events have kept the men and women of Team Eifel focused on “real world” mission readiness. My concern is that we may not fully recognize the preparation required to succeed in the NATO tactical evaluation and the follow-on increase in “real world” readiness we’ll realize from that preparation.

Some may question the need to validate our combat capabilities to our

NATO inspectors now, when conflicts in other theaters are so near at hand. I prefer to look at the TAC EVAL preparation as a tactically focused dress rehearsal for what our country may ask us to do very soon.

While the NATO TAC EVAL scenario might not equate to our expected theater of operations, it can still test our ability to execute our mission under the stressors of war. I propose preparation in three categories: professional, organizational and personal.

Professional preparation involves knowing what role you will play on the team, honing the skills required for success in your role and anticipating some of the unexpected requirements of war. Supervisors should communicate roles to their airmen and airmen who are unsure of their roles should ask what they will be tasked to do.
Honest evaluation of your professional strengths and weaknesses will help focus your professional preparation.
Strengthen the areas you deem weakest and exercise those areas in our two Phase II Local Salty Nation exercises.

Anticipating the unexpected may sound tough, but everyone will be subject to skills evaluation in certain areas. NATO evaluators will test us on our knowledge and procedures for alarm conditions, post attack reconnaissance, self-aid and buddy care, and chemical warfare defense among other things.

Organizational readiness is fairly simple if everyone knows their role and is prepared to perform it. The difficult part occurs when the inspector (or SCUD missile) takes out a team leader or critical team member.

Organizations at all levels must prepare for this eventuality and pre-select team members who can step up and get the job done. This requires training subordinates in duties they may not normally be tasked to accomplish and talking through the “what ifs” of fallout. No team can afford to be “one deep” at any position.

Lastly, but certainly not least, is personal preparation. I am differentiating this from professional preparation

because about 12 years ago I learned some valuable lessons. Faced with a no-notice deployment to Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm it was clear that my professional preparation was far better than my personal preparation.

Personal preparation entails preparing yourself and your family for lengthy deployments and involvement in dangerous wartime operations.
Beyond the minimum requirements for finances, wills and powers of attorney, military members should routinely discuss and “what if” the hardships of war on their families.

Spouses should be comfortable with the knowledge of what support agencies are available to them. Some families will be most comfortable in-place, while others with young children may want to return to the United States. The best options are family specific, but warrant discussion before the flag goes up.

Preparation produces readiness ...
Team Eifel is ready and focused!

Not all winter holidays are alike:

Jewish layleader shares Hanukkah story, festival of lights

By Master Sgt. David A. Berry
Jewish lay leader

Thanksgiving is nearing and so is the official holiday shopping season.
When many people think of the winter holidays, they picture nativity scenes, Christmas trees and Santa Claus. But out there is another holiday many know little of. This holiday is Hanukkah, the Jewish Festival of Lights.

Many equate it with being a “Jewish Christmas,” as both holidays begin fairly close to one another, but it has an entirely different meaning.

This year, Hanukkah begins the evening of Nov. 29. The holiday is rooted deeply into the Jewish past. It was in 175 B.C. the Jewish people were under the rule of the Seleucid Greek Empire. The ruler of the time, Antiochus IV, had decided that everyone in the empire would worship the Greek gods. He eventually outlawed Judaism, honoring the Sabbath and other Jewish rituals such as circumcision. He even outlawed the Jewish High Holy days.

Then, one day, in the town of Modin, a certain Jew named Mattathias slew one of his brethren making a sacrifice to one of the pagan gods. This action started a civil war that lasted nearly four years.

After his death, his son Judah, called Macabee, the “Hammer,” took over the fight. In the end, the Jewish people would win their freedom and rededicate the Temple in Jerusalem.

Legend has it, that when the High Priest attempted to light the Great Menorah, only one vial of oil could be found. Miraculously, this vile burned for eight days, giving us the eight days and nights of Hanukkah.

As with any other holiday, there are many traditions and foods that accompany it. One such tradition is eating potato pancakes, also called “latkes.”
We eat them because being fried in copious amounts of oil, they remind us of the oil that miraculously burned for eight days and nights.

Hanukkah also has a lesson for all of humanity. Being the first recorded fight for religious freedom, it teaches us to respect the rights and beliefs of all peoples, whatever they may be.

So, with each successive night of Hanukkah, as we light our menorah, we should reflect upon the spiritual and the physical. Remembering those who have gone before us, recounting their brave deeds of keeping freedom’s great call alive.

The base will hold a Hanukkah Menorah lighting Dec. 2 at 5:30 p.m.at the base chapel. Everyone is welcome.
For the betterment of all of humanity, a good Hanukkah to all! Shalom.

Christmas markets usher in holiday season festivities

Castle, medieval town sites of traditional winter celebrations

By Iris Reiff
52nd Fighter Wing Public Affairs Office

The Christmas season opens in the Eifel with two traditional markets in Dudeldorf and Manderscheid. Both markets are well known for being unique and setting an effective holiday mood.

Dudeldorf market

The Dudeldorf Christmas market has become quite popular over the years, attracting people from other German regions. This market is nestled within a scenic community, featuring charming houses and quaint medieval corners.

Again this year, more than 40 vendors will sell food and Christmas crafts in small, decorated wooden huts set up in the town streets. Bakers also prepare special holiday treats, including the Eifel's longest Christmas cake.

Entertainment includes children's games and movies, an icon display, Christmas mansion tours inside Dudeldorf castle and the Dudeldorf arched gate. A raffle also offers people the chance to win prizes.

On both days, Sankt Nikolaus, the German Santa, will hand out treats to children. Jens Gottschalk is on schedule to read Christmas fairy tales and German stories. Musicians and singers perform Christmas music and chorales on stage.

The Dudeldorf market opens today at 4 p.m., Saturday at 11 a.m. and Sunday at 11:30 a.m. The market closes at 8 p.m. daily.

Manderscheid market

Manderscheid city and castle officials invite the Eifel military community to its Christmas market Saturday and Sunday.

Festivities take place in the famous Niederburg upper castle and within the castle's ring. Castle officials laud last year's event as a great success, which attracted more than 5,000 visitors.

Large-scale entertainment is scheduled this year. Highlights include a live Christmas mansion and castle illumination in the evening.

Festival officials work diligently to create a unique atmosphere where people can shop for Christmas gifts and art. Vendors' booths offer wooden toys, engraved works, holiday incense oils, Christmas figure art, craft items, pearl works, silver jewelry and much more. A variety of traditional holiday foods are also available throughout the event.

From the center of town, a bus shuttles visitors to the castle, which is located outside of Manderscheid.

For more information, call castle officials at 06572-737 or the Manderscheid administrative office at 06572-921549.

The Manderscheid Christmas market is open Saturday from 3 to 8 p.m. and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Entry to the castle is free.

Advent wreath lighting illuminates beginning of Christmas celebrations

By Iris Reiff
52nd Fighter Wing
Public Affairs Office

The four Sundays of Advent mark the beginning of the Christmas celebration and with it, the beginning of the church year.

Advent, which has existed in the Western church since the 6th century, was originally a time for fasting. It wasn't until the period of the enlightenment that Advent became more and more clearly the time when families prepared for Christmas.

The Advent wreath became popular in northern Germany soon after World War I. Since the 1930s, it's become popular throughout the German-speaking parts of Europe.

The wreath is made of fir branches with four candles, one of which is lighted each Advent Sunday until all four are burning together.

Sunday is "Advent 1." The first candle will be lighted during church services and at people's homes. Three more candles and Christmas arrives.
